The Crows and the Snake.

"Strolling in Burma one day," says a writer in the London Field, "I came to a ditch bridge, and about ten yards off there was a mass of black soft mud caused by buffaloes rolling. On the bridge was a small brown snake about two feet in length. This snake is an ordinary jungle inhabitant and is very venomous. Surrounding him were a mob of some dozen crows. Whenever the snake attempted to escape the nearest bird would jump in and jerk it back by the tail. The crows generally kept just out of the snake's reach, but on three separate occasions the birds were struck."

"Immediately on being bitten a crow flew over to the wet mud and swallowed three or four mouthfuls without a pause. It then perched up in a tree and took no further part in the fight. The incident ended in the snake escaping between the planks of the bridge. What interests me is why did the stricken birds eat the mud? Was it taken as a kind of antidote or what was the reason?"

The Rainbow.

When a ray of sunlight falls on a raindrop it is refracted; then part of the light is reflected from the internal surface and again refracted on leaving the drop. The white sunlight is not only refracted when it enters and leaves the drop, but dispersion also takes place. The eye sees bright circles of light for each kind of light, and since sunlight is made up of different kinds of homogeneous light we get a spectrum of colors, the red being outside and the other colors following in the order of descending wave length. The whole constitutes a primary rainbow. A secondary bow is sometimes seen outside the first. This is formed by the light being twice reflected inside the raindrops. The less refrangible rays are on the inner side. Rainbows are due to still more internal reflections are too feeble to be observed. It is possible to get a white rainbow if the sun is clouded or if there is a mixture of raindrops of very different sizes.

Male Fashions in 1850.

Male fashions of 1850 had other discomforts besides long hair. Trousers were tight and buttoned under the foot with broad straps. Every man who aspired to be well dressed wore his coat so high in the collar that the back of the hat rested on it. This fashion was so prevalent that, according to Sir Algernon West, "every hat had a crescent of cloth on the back of the brim to prevent the rubbing of the beaver or imitation beaver of which the hat was made, for silk hats were not then invented." And from the same authority we learn that "opera hats were unknown, and in the evening a folding chapeau bras was always carried under the arm. Nobody had an apothecary or a solicitor would have dreamed of leaving his hat in the hall of the house where he was calling or dining."—London Chronicle.

Dr. Yates' Trousers.

St. Catharine's was the first Cambridge college to produce a don who dared to stagger humbly by wearing trousers. He was Dr. Lowther Yates, "a large, square man from Cumberland," suspected of radical opinions, who was master of "Cats" during the closing years of the eighteenth century. As Yates, when vice-chancellor, walked in procession to the university church, wearing trousers instead of the orthodox knee breeches, somebody shouted from a window: "Gadzooks, gadzooks. Lowther Yates in pantaloons!" The profane impromptu poet was captured and proved to be Yates' own nephew. "Gadzooks" was a Cumbrian expletive with which Yates was wont to express intense astonishment. —Westminster Gazette.

Genesis of the Horseshoe.

It is known that the hoofs of horses were protected by boots of leather at a very early period in the world's history—at a time which at least antedates Pliny and Aristotle, both of whom make mention of the fact. These leather boots were sometimes studded with metal nails, but more usually worn without extra trimming, the cheapness of that commodity making it possible for the owner of the steed to "reboot" him at any time.

A Useful Femur.

Excited Naturalist—Are you aware, my dear sir, that this gatepost of yours is the femur of an ornithomimid?" Farmer (apologetically)—I always thought it was something odd like. It didn't match the other post now—London Punch.

A Strong Cup.

Guest (in cheap restaurant)—Look here, waiter, I thought I told you to bring me a strong cup of coffee? Waiter—Well, what's the matter with that cup? You couldn't break it with an ax.

Feminine Tactics.

"Why are you talking about a trip to Europe? It would cost your husband $1,000 or more."

Her Favorite Sports.

"Is your wife a lover of outdoor sports?"

"I should say so. She's bargain or house hunting all the time."—Detroit Free Press.

Easy.

"How shall I break my husband of playing poker?"

"Just break him and keep him that way."—Cleveland Leader.

One Who Came

A Memorial Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

She had been looking for him all through the warm spring, and now, late in May, she felt that he must come. Another week would bring the 30th of the month, and Memorial Day, with its tender observance of all the beloved dead, would come to crush down her cherished hope of Robert's return.

Esther looked wistfully across the pasture, and tears filled her blue eyes until hillside and pointed cedars were a dark blur.

When she had wiped them away some one was coming wearily down the narrow path some one tall and thin, dressed in dark clothing, with a gray felt hat on his drooping head.

The man did not lift his eyes from the ground, but tramped steadily on with his gaze fixed on the winding path under his feet. When the path ceased at the fence he looked up and saw Esther gazing at him longingly, lovingly, but there was no recognition in his glance, merely undisguised wonderment.

Esther's radiant smile faded as she searched the handsome face for some sign of recognition. It was Robert Webb, paler, thinner and curiously changed in expression, and yet it was Robert. A sudden terror filled her soul.

"Robert," she cried softly, "don't you know me?"

He stared curiously at her while a slow red burned into his thin cheeks. He lifted the gray hat and showed dark hair streaked plentifully with white.

"I am afraid you have made a mistake," he said in a deep, husky voice that was like Robert's own tones. "My name is Robert, but I am sure I would have remembered you if we had met before. I came across Mr. Lane. I was directed to take the short cut across the lots from the station—is this his farm?"

Esther shrunk back.

"Yes, this is Mr. Lane's farm. You will find him at the house or barn. Take the path through the orchard."

With a murmured word of thanks the man replaced his hat, leaped the fence and disappeared in the gathering twilight of the orchard.

When Esther went to the house her fair hair was wet with dew, but her eyes were very bright and shining.

In the sitting room they were all gathered about the evening lamp. The light fell on the red table cover and was reflected in the comfortable furnishings of the room. Mr. Lane was reading the Atlantic with an interest quite unabated by a long winter's pursuit of his closely printed pages. Helen and Agatha were embroidering.

They all glanced up as Esther entered the room, blinking at the light.

"You'll catch your death out in the dampness, child," remonstrated her mother as Esther sat down in a low rocker beside her. "We've been wishing you'd come in and give us a little music."

"You promised to practice that duet with me, Esther," complained Helen. "I don't see why you want to run away every night after supper. You can't guess what's happened since you've been gone," she added teasingly.

The color leaped into Esther's pale cheeks. She struggled for a moment with her quickening breath before her words found utterance. "What has happened, Nell?" she asked, with assumed carelessness.

"Nothing at all," interposed Mrs. Lane, smiling, "except that father's felled to death because he's got some one to help him all summer."

"Who is it?" asked Esther.

"A man who came here tonight. The station master sent him, knowing your father was put to it for help on the farm. He's young and willing, though he's a little out of health. He's been a soldier, and he wants to have a summer farming it to get back his health again."

"And likewise fill his pocketbook," yawned Farmer Lane, stretching himself luxuriously. "I guess we'll get along well as any so. He's a fine, pleasant spoken young chap, but he's seen a sight of trouble. I take it. His hair's as white as my own. He's coming tomorrow."

"What is his name?" asked Esther in a muffled voice.

"Robert Munson. Looks like some one I've seen before. Can't think who it is to save my life," said her father, rising and filling his pipe at the mantelshelf.

With a quick movement Esther arose and was gone from the room.

"Father Lane," exclaimed Agatha in a stage whisper, "it's just come to me who this man looks like! He looks enough like Robert Webb to be his own brother!"

They cast startled glances at one another. "I declare if he doesn't!" gasped Mrs. Lane at last. "I hope Esther won't notice it. It would upset her terribly, pa."

"That may be," returned Mr. Lane decidedly. "Esther's mourned over Rob Webb just two years longer than he was worth. If he'd cared anything for her he'd stayed behind and made a home for her instead of running off and joining the army as if he had no responsibilities at home. Jesse better get used to seeing this new chap around. She's got to get cured of this grieving business, by George!"

The large brown hat struck the table with a force that startled the three women. They watched Mr. Lane march from the room with angry strides, and when the door had closed with an echoing slam their heads bent together in whispered consultation.

Memorial day was a holiday, and the Lanes usually spent it with relatives in an adjoining village. This day was no exception, and so it was quite early in the morning that they drove away in the comfortable survey, leaving Robert Munson standing, bare-headed by the wide white gate.

Esther had said nothing about going to the cemetery to place flowers on Robert's grave. She could wait until their return, and when the crowd had left the graveyard she would climb the hill and place her offering there, alone in the sunset.

When the long day was closing they came home again, Esther with her arms full of white blossoms gleaned from her aunt's garden. The new farm hand had taken advantage of the holiday and was nowhere to be seen so Farmer Lane put up the horses and the others went indoors.

"I'll be back presently, mother," said Esther, tossing her hat on the table and gathering up her flowers. "I'm going to the cemetery now. Lion will come with me."

"Very well, dear," said Mrs. Lane. Esther whistled to the dog and walked through the orchard to the pasture. Robert Munson was leaning on the fence, looking at the reflected lights on the distant hills.

"I am going up on the hill, Robert. Will you come along and carry my flowers?" asked Esther bravely.

"Certainly, Miss Esther," he said pleasantly, and so together they crossed the pasture and climbed the hill to the place where the tall white shaft made a memorial for the fallen soldier boy. All about the base beautiful flowers were strewn, and some one had placed a little flag in the green turf. Robert Munson was looking curiously at the inscription when Esther gently took the flowers from his grasp and dropped them on the ground at his feet. Then she placed her hands on his shoulders and looked into his eyes.

"Robert, Robert!" she cried tragically. "Don't you know me, won't you ever recognize me again?"

Very gently Robert Munson took her cold hands in his warm ones, and the firm pressure of his grasp seemed to give her wavering strength more courage.

"Miss Esther," he said gently, "whom do you take me for? Who do you think I am?"

"You are Robert Webb!" she cried eagerly. "See this stone was broken for you. Your father died of a broken heart when you were killed, and your mother went away to live with her sister. I am here. I have not forgotten. See—I have kept your picture all these years. I have worn it always here."

She drew away her hands and pulled a chain from her neck and opened a round locket. The picture therein was that of a young man, much younger than Robert Munson, and while there was a resemblance, it might have been more in expression than in actual features.

"You have made a great mistake, Miss Esther," said Munson at last. "I am so sorry. I wish I knew what to say to you. I suppose you think the report of Webb's death was an error and that I am he, but it is not so. He stretched out a hand to support her wavering figure, but she leaned for support against the white marble.

"I have seen service in the Philippines, and I did know Bob Webb for a short time, and I know he was killed. I am sorry to have to tell you this. As for myself, I wanted a season in the country at hard work to recover my health. It is sheer chance that I came to Little River and was directed to your father's farm. I have parents and brothers and sisters in Boston in fact, I am afraid I can prove only too well that I am not Robert Webb." He looked down at her with infinite pity in his fine eyes—a pity that was so akin to something warmer that she seemed to feel it unfold her like a comforting garment.

"I am so sorry I have annoyed you. What must you think of me? You see," Esther broke down and sobbed bitterly, and Robert Munson stood beside her with a friendly hand pressing her shoulder. It was with his handkerchief that Esther wiped away her tears, while he knelt down and devoutly strove the flowers she had brought about the foot of the shaft. Then he rose to his tall height and held out his hand.

"Come, Miss Esther; let us go back home again. There are light and life beyond as well as here. We who are left behind have our work to do in the world. I'm a clumsy fellow at expressing myself, but try to look on the bright side of things."

It was a quiet walk home again across the pasture and through the orchard, and it proved to be many a long day before Esther took the same route again. There seemed to be a veil lifted after that day. Life was brighter, better, and have seemed not to be the hopeless thing she had one time believed.

When at her later day came and another Robert told his love by the orchard fence the swallows dipped in the pale light, and the bats darted from the shadows, and the song that the whippoorwill sang seemed a psalm of joy, and the whole world was bathed in a rosy light that was not the reflection from the sunset.

A Beautiful Interlude of the Calendar.

WHAT would the world be without sentiment? What would and what do countries amount to whose people are not inspired with patriotic ardor? Love of country and admiration for the loyalty that dares all and sacrifices life itself for the nation is America's precious asset. It is a sentiment that has been intensified through the generations, and today, with all our broader study of sociological problems, with all our Utopian ideas, with all our political differences, we have the stronger underlying sentiment for the country for whose destiny we are ambitious even to the point of ideal impracticalism, but for whose present honor and prestige we would die. We are not perfect citizens, therefore we cannot have a perfect democracy, but the one that we have built has risen from the fields of battle over which were strewn the flower of America's heroes. Our present day prestige among the nations has not been attained through paid armies and enforced military service, but through the self-sacrifice of our patriots. Wherefore should it not be precious to us and its attainment be the occasion of ceremony and observation on Memorial Day set apart as our solemn holiday. It quickens the American pulse to national proportion and from our narrow lives or the engrossing circumstances which surround us, we awake to the fact that even in peace our country is precious to us and hero worship a trait but slumbering in our hearts.

We are revealed to ourselves on this day of homage. It is a beautiful pause in the year, a day of repose and retrospection. We are better for it and the passing of each year's Memorial Day leaves a richer soil from which does spring great American triumphs. It quickens the desire of our youth to merit their country and in times of peace they seek to sustain her position among the powers of the world while ever standing ready to emulate the heroes of '61, whose recompense is the nation's undying gratitude so beautifully expressed by successive generations. It touches a deeper chord than does the celebrating of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

THE "Sotoyome Scimitar," the Healdsburg newspaper with a name that signifies gore and other dreadful things, has been attached by its creditors, and, to use a homely phrase, "thereby hangs a tale." The "Scimitar" was established about two years ago by Ande Nowlin, and it was to be conducted in the interest of the wine and hop industries of its section which were menaced by local calamity howlers and long-haired reformers. Had its editor hewed strictly to the line of the policies mapped out for his newspaper at the outset of his journalistic venture there is no reason to doubt but what success would have crowned his efforts.

He did not do this, however, but made the mistake of many another country journalist of "throwing his hooks" into his local newspaper contemporaries in a spirit of jealous business rivalry and cutting the price of his publication down to a ridiculous low figure. In other words, had the editor flourished the blade of his Scimitar over the heads of the hypocritical reformers of his town and attended strictly to his own business and let that of his newspaper rivals alone he might be on top today instead of being the under dog in a scrap with a phalanx of angry creditors.

Sewer Bond Election

THE election to vote on the proposition to issue bonds for a $20,000 municipal sewer system will be submitted to the voters today. This election is one of vital interest to our people as on it will hinge an answer to the question: "Is Sonoma to advance and keep pace with the times, or will she retrograde and fall back into the old rut of an unprogressive city from which she has been bravely working her way out the past few years?"

For the past four years, and ever since bonding the town for our new hall of justice, a remarkable transformation has taken place in our city. Many fine residences have been built, new business blocks erected and in other ways much has been added to the wealth and prosperity of our people. Therefore we say, let us keep right on our march of progress by giving the sewer bond proposition our unqualified endorsement at the polls today. It is due to our civic pride as well as to the general public health to do so. Let every citizen perform his duty.

Memorial Day Exercises

The committee appointed by M. E. Cummings, President of Board of City Trustees, to arrange for the proper observance of Memorial Day, Monday, May 30, has prepared the following program:

1. Call to Order.....Robt. Poppe
2. Invocation.....Rev. Mr. Lee
3. Flag Salute and song.....School Children
4. Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.....Marjorie Buchan
5. Song.....The Choir
6. Address.....Mr. Edward B. Payne
7. America.....Audience
8. Benediction.....Rev. Mr. Day

A procession of school children will form on the public school grounds at 10 A. M. and accompanied by the Sonoma Valley Band rendering Chopin's Funeral March will proceed to Union Hall, where the above program will be given. It is earnestly requested that patrons of the schools and parents in general encourage their children to take part in the procession, as this has proven in the past to be one of the most pleasing features of the day's exercises and it is hoped that it will be made even more attractive on this occasion. All children are invited to take part.

The committee in charge wishes to state that all veterans and widows of veterans are especially invited to attend the morning exercises and occupy seats on the platform. The graves of the departed in the cemetery will be decorated in the afternoon and the committee asks that all those who can do so, will please come to Union Hall at 3 P. M. with their carriages and other conveyances to assist in taking to the cemetery the flowers and those who will aid in decorating.

R. CANTONI.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and set it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

On to Eureka

A strong impetus was given to the extension work of the Northwestern Pacific railroad by the recent visit of Robert S. Lovett of New York, the new president of the Southern Pacific Company, and the gap of 110 miles between Willits, Mendocino County and Hines, Mendocino County, will now be rushed through to speedy completion.

Walter Willett, who has the contract for closing the gap, says he has been advised by the railroad people to rush the work. He also remarked:

"We have been employing about 150 men on the work," said Willett, "but now we are making every effort to get more. We have 300 men on the jobs at present. There has been difficulty in getting men, but there are more responding for work now."

Woman's Club Notes.

At the short business meeting, which preceded the social hour at the Woman's Club last Friday, it was voted to order from H. H. Granice, the lowest bidder, 150 copies of the Year Book and By-laws, at a cost of $14.50 for the whole.

A rising vote of thanks was given the gentleman of Sonoma who so generously gave their time and effort toward making the recent entertainment such a grand success. One new name was proposed for membership.

It was announced that all the girls who are to represent the business firms in the Carnival Trades Procession would meet June 1st to arrange for their fancy drill.

Mrs. Hill told of the recent trip made with Mrs. Stofen to San Francisco in quest of the original Mission bell. It was found with its name carved upon it in the Suro heirs, Dr. Merritt, spoke very encouragingly as to its future restoration to its old home in Sonoma.

The topic for the social hour was Current Events and Mesdames Burlingame, Woodworth and Whiting (the last named being represented by Mrs. Woodworth) gave the club much interesting information regarding events ranging from local to world-wide significance. Music followed, two songs being charmingly sung by Miss Ramona Granice.

Then occurred an unusual scene in club life. It chanced to be the 20th wedding anniversary of Mrs. L. Breitenbach, the afternoon hostess, and an informal surprise was given her. To the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March she was led to the desk by President Stofen, where in well chosen words, Mrs. Stearns told of the appreciation in which she was held by the Club, and of her sterling worth as wife and mother; and then she was presented with some beautiful Haviland china. Between smiles and tears she expressed her thanks, while her friends crowded around her and offered hearty congratulations for many happy returns of the day.

Sonoma Lost to San Francisco
Juveniles

The San Francisco Juveniles base ball team defeated the Sonoma nine last Sunday by a score of 11 to 1.

The score might indicate that the game was too one-sided to be interesting, but such was not the case. Many good plays were made on both sides, particularly by the outfielders and pitchers. Capt. Pauli of the home team made a great running catch in short right field, and the Juveniles center fielder did some of the fastest fielding ever seen on a local diamond. Pitchers A'Dee and Jansen struck out 11 and 10 men respectively.

Batteries: Sonoma—Jansen and Poppe.

Juveniles—A'Dee and Al Walters.

Umpires—Carpenter and John Doe.

The Kenwood club will come to Sonoma Sunday, boys. A good game is promised. Admission 25 and 10c.

He was a native of Ireland and aged 69 years.

A Sad Case

Ernest Gassanessi, a Venetian, was found wandering around Melitta in an aimless manner on Tuesday last and taken into custody and was later found to be demented by a commission in lunacy. His case is a sad and peculiar one. Coming to this country with his wife some months ago he was robbed of his savings of many years. He then sought work at the Melitta quarries. Bassanessi was a highly educated man and withal an over-sensitive one as well. He was a school teacher by profession and became the butt of his fellow workmen, who grieved him unmercifully. This and the loss of his savings preyed on his mind to such an extent that he has become a mental wreck.

Candidate for County Clerk on Republican Ticket.

W. W. Felt Jr., a deputy in County Recorder Fred G. Nagle's office and Secretary of the Republican County Central Committee, is out for the nomination for County Clerk, subject to the decision of the Republican voters of the county at the August primaries. It is not likely that Mr. Felt will have a Republican opponent for the nomination, he seeks, as he is one of the most popular men in his party and if given the nomination will be a hard man to beat at the November election.

Our Few Real Needs.

As civilization and culture make people more prosperous and more comfortable they are prone to forget how few and simple their real needs are. We need sleep, but not much of it, and most of us are asleep exactly when we ought most of all to be awake. We need food, but it is not necessary that food should be cunningly disguised with a thousand devices to tickle the jaded and surfeited palate, for the main trouble is that we eat too much and not too little. We need clothes to wear, but the one suit of fur that lasts certain animals all their lives is so beautiful that some men spend their whole time in search of it. We need heaven and the sense of a higher power directing our lives and our destinies, but we spend most of our time refuting and denying the possibility of anything bigger or better than we are. We need the love of friends, and therefore it is the more strange that we should spend our time not in improving ourselves, but in decorating our bodies, filling them with food and bustling them about over the earth in search of ever fresh sensations.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Poor Fish.

This melancholy tragedy happened in Holland. A fisherman who caught a salt herring placed the fish in a tub full of salt water. Every day he took out some of the salt water and replaced it with fresh. In a few days he had the herring living in fresh water. But, not content at stopping here, he decided to try another plan. Every day he took a little water out of the tub until none was left, and the herring was still alive. The next course was walking. In a month or so the herring had developed feet and learned to walk, and he accompanied his master on his journeys. One day as they were crossing over a narrow bridge the herring caught sight of the water. Reminiscences of former days flashed through his head, and he resolved to try the water. But while still gazing at it he fell in, and before his master could aid him he was drowned.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Verdict.

The lecture was over, and the gentleman who did the talking strained his ears as he followed the audience out of the hall to gather in, so far as he could, what sort of an impression he had made. As he dreamed who were making their way out just ahead of him rendered a verdict. "Well, Bankside," said one of them, "what did you think of it?" "I've heard worse," said Bankside. "Did you think it was at all illuminating?" asked the other. "In an old-fashioned way, yes," replied the venerable Bankside. "I don't quite catch your point," said the questioner. "Why, it was illuminating, but it struck me as having more gas than electricity about it," explained the critic.—Judge.

The Onion.

The onion has been so long in cultivation that its original form is not definitely known. There are so called wild onions that grow in the woods. Nobody ever tastes them but once, and there is about the taste no suggestion that cultivation or anything else could ever make them grateful to the human palate. In all probability the onion is a native of western Asia and adjacent parts of Africa, since it is mentioned in old Egyptian writings and the Pentateuch.

Tart Repartee.

Or Sir William Harcourt. Disraeli once said in his affectedly cynical way. "He has the three essential qualifications of success in politics—a fine person, a loud voice and no principles." To this when it was repeated to him Harcourt rejoined. "Leaving out the first two qualifications, it might almost be applied to 'Dizzy' himself."

An Autobiography.

Mrs. Chugwater—Josiah, what is an autobiography? Mr. Chugwater—It's the story of a man's life written as he thinks it ought to be. Couldn't you tell that from the word itself?—Chicago Tribune.

A Success.

Byker—I attended a successful sleight of hand performance last night. Pyker—Really. Byker—Yes, I lent a conjurer a counterfeit half dollar, and he gave me back a good one.

One Better.

First Child—We've got a new baby at our house. Second Child (contemptuously)—We've got a new pa at ours. —Presbyterian Standard.

This being called me, whatever it is, consists of a little flesh, a little breath and the part which governs.—Marcus Aurelius.
